REVIEW OF FRUIT CONDITIONS. Last Season a Peculiarly Disastrous and

Unprofitable One. year 1894 of the agricultural department there. e printed for the first time in the year book now almost finished. It characterizes the season as a peculiarly disastrous and unprofitable one in most lines of fruit culture. In the south the result was largely due to the unfavorable climatic conditions that have prevailed during the late winter and early spring months. Fair fruit crops were harvested, however, in the New England, middle, Atlantic and lake states, and in portions of Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska. West of the Rocky mountains there was an abundant yield, but losses due to the paralysis of freight traffic during the railroad strike in June and July, together with the low prices caused by the prevailing industrial depression, resulted in very low net returns to the growers and shippers of that region. The year was characterized to be exceptional extremes of heat and cold, drouth and moisture in different sections

He isstrong in the south, but that statement does not by any means sum up all his possibilities before a convention. Illinois Republicans would unite upon him. Georgia, Arizona, Kentucky and Tennessee will be with him, but in all the southern states there live warm and influential friends of the Illinois man. I believe that he will get half of the entire southern delegation, and when the break comes on the favorites, Lincoln and Allison, will get the benefit of it. A Design Which Might Have Materially Affected the Destiny of Europe. The story goes that Wellington used to ride over daily, with one or two of his staff, from his headquarters at St. Jean de Luz, and take his stand on the top of a wooded sand hillock, called Adour, which commands a view of both banks and the town itself two miles up stream.
